

MOHD SYAZWAN ZAINAL

Australia Malaysia Virtual PhD
Internship Program - 2022

Mediation-Moderation Effects of Sources of Career Self-efficacy and Service Quality of University on the Relationship Between Autistic Trait and Career Self-efficacy Among Malaysian Undergraduates

Thesis Outline

Focusing on how autistic traits influence career self-efficacy, which refers to an individual's confidence in their ability to make decisions and take actions towards their career goals.

Supervisors & Institutions

Assoc. Prof. Hui Min Low
Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia

Assoc. Prof. Darren Hedely
La Trobe University

Future Goals

With the knowledge and international exposure I have gained, I am confident in my ability to produce more high-impact publications that not only advance scholarly understanding but also address practical challenges within the autism community.

AMVPIP Experience

AMVPIP gave me a valuable opportunity to broaden my academic and professional network, particularly in the field of autism studies. The program provided the chance to connect and engage with international scholars actively involved in autism research, showing up new perspectives and allowing me to exchange ideas. It has strengthened my global network, deepened my engagement in autism research, and helped me make meaningful contributions to both the local and international academic community.

Key Takeaways

- 1) Ethics and integrity in research
- 2) More systematic management of research affairs
- 3) A different dimension in the field of autism